

Nature IS Noisy

Bio ...

Nature is Noisy bring their collection of original, sexy funk, rastabilly, shamanic jazz, and red neck riffery. Guitar, drums and bass are skilfully crafted with clever song-writing, samples and loops.

Their delicious, fun, danceable, musings on philosophy, love and hedonism will leave you smiling and feeling like life is good.

Playing since 2019 largely around the West Country, Nature is Noisy are now releasing new singles.

Cameron Patrick Scott (vocals, guitar & noises), Michael Hanby (vocals & bass) & Monty De Lans (drums).

Cameron, Michael, and Monty have all had previous musical careers, in a variety of bands, over the last few decades, which have led them to co-create the musical incarnation that is, Nature is Noisy.

The Nature is Noisy foregathering began in 2019 when Michael & Cameron started working together on a variety of material written both separately and together. A couple of seasons of West Country gigging together saw them develop a distinctive, catchy vibe which pulses throughout their 'genre fluid' range of original compositions and goes down well with everyone who encounters it.

The addition of Monty into their collaboration has unleashed a new dimension to their sound which has been received exceptionally well in live performances.

Catch their unmissable live show around the west country this summer and tune in on music streaming and or social media platforms to catch their single releases starting this May with Thing I Like To Do.
